1. Exective Summary

Purpose

This section should answer "why" and explain the purpose of the deliverable, its scope, and how it fits into the larger project context.

Intended audience (1 paragraph)

This section should inform potential readers if the document is relevant for them. The intended audience are the main users of the information in the deliverable. The audience should be rather precisely defined focusing on shared characteristics, interests, and needs (e.g. decision-makers involved in land-use planning, environmental management, or policy development; policy makers working at a given scale; researchers on specific fields; land managers responsible for specific types of land, such as agricultural, forestry or urban land).

Description of the main activities (2 paragraphs)

This section should provide a concise overview of the main activities carried, including an explanation of the methodologies, approaches and if relevant the geographical setting.

Key results (2-3 paragraphs)

This section should summarize the most important results contained in the deliverable. These results should be stated as clearly and specifically as possible, and they should be understandable to a non-technical audience. Bullet points can be used for clarity and ease of reading:

- Result 1: Describe the result and explain why it's significant
- Result 2: Describe the result and explain why it's significant
- Result 3: Describe the result and explain why it's significant

Research and practice implications (2 paragraphs)

This section should interpret the results, focusing on their significance for stakeholders and provide an analysis of how these results may shape upcoming research or contribute to practical solutions. It should also describe the potential impact of these findings on the specific problem at hand, offering insights into how they may inform and guide problem-solving efforts.

Policy implications (1 paragraph)

This section should provide an interpretation of the results for policy makers. What actions, decisions, or changes should be considered by whom because of the findings. Implications to the eight Mission Soil specific objectives should be described. If the results are only relevant for policy makers at specific level (e.g. national or EU), this should be made explicit as well as if the results do not have direct policy implications.

Conclusion (1 paragraph)

This is a brief wrap-up of the summary. Here, the significance of the deliverable and its potential impact on the project should be summarised. This could include the implications for future work or the next steps in the project.
